

CALL FOR PAPERS

PRISM is the National Defense University's (NDU) premier journal on complex security issues. We are pleased to announce a Call for Papers for a forthcoming 2016 issue which will be focused on Africa.

The following themes of are among those of interest to the editorial team for this special issue:

- Defense institution building in Africa
- The role of African militaries in state formation
- The convergence of transnational criminal and terrorist organizations in Africa
- Non-traditional threats to security in Africa

PRISM is published by the Center for Complex Operations in NDU's Institute for National Strategic Studies. PRISM is a security studies journal chartered to inform members of U.S. government agencies, allies, and other partners about complex and integrated national and international security operations; reconstruction and state-building; relevant policy and strategy; lessons learned; and developments in training and education to transform security and development.

Published quarterly, PRISM—which is distributed to over 10,000 subscribers in more than 80 countries and is published online for public access—reaches policymakers, scholars, practitioners, international governmental and military decisionmakers, United Nations and other multilateral organization officials, nongovernmental organization representatives, and other participants in complex operations.

Articles must be factually accurate, critiques delivered with precision, and authors are encouraged to recommend clear solutions or to arm the reader with actionable knowledge. PRISM encourages authors to aggressively seek out and identify problems that should be fixed irrespective of prevailing U.S. Government policy or current military doctrine.

Manuscripts should be between 4,000 and 8,000 words in length with a 200-350 word abstract, and sent via email to prism@ndu.edu no later than August 22, 2016. Please visit PRISM online at <http://cco.ndu.edu/Publications/PRISM.aspx> for more information and examples of past contributions.

Regards,

Michael Miklaucic

Editor, PRISM The Center for Complex Operations is congressionally mandated to: (1) provide for effective coordination in the preparation of Department of Defense personnel and other United States Government personnel for complex operations; (2) foster unity of effort during complex operations among the departments and agencies of the United States Government; foreign governments and militaries; international organizations and international nongovernmental organizations; and domestic nongovernmental organizations; (3) conduct research; collect, analyze, and distribute lessons learned; and compile best practices in matters relating to complex operations; (4) identify gaps in the education and training of Department of Defense personnel, and other relevant United States Government personnel, relating to complex operations, and to facilitate efforts to fill such gaps. CCO is located in the Institute for National Strategic Studies (INSS) at the National Defense University.

